Alderney Airport gets weather proof runway spray

The runway at Alderney Airport has been resurfaced with a weather proof seal to protect it.

It took four nights to cover the 28,000 square metres with a product called Rhinophalt.

Contractors worked through the night and finished on Sunday to ensure the airport could remain open during the day.

The runway, taxiways and apron were sprayed with Rhinophalt and new markings applied including some new ones to help with visibility.

Director of Ports, Colin le Ray says the spray is a temporary fix while they plan for a more substantial refurbishment in the future.
